1. What were the positive traits they exhibited? (3 points)

2. How did these traits make a positive impact on you? (3 points)

3. How did this coach help to mold/influence who you are today? (3 points)

4. How do you want to teach your players to be? (3 points)

5. What kind of influence do you want to have on them? (3 points)

1. Preparational genius, dedicated individual, hard worker, full of love for football, funny, intelligent, charismatic, meticulous, honest

2. These traits rubbed off on me like a sponge because our characteristics are very much alike. They taught me how to use my brain as importantly physiologically as physically to achieve the things I want. They taught me advanced pre-preparation on how to study my opponents to be able to defeat them. They taught me how to work extremely hard and be consistent, how to be myself in real time, always expressing my creativity and talent, and just being a positive beacon to the world.

3. My coach helped influence who I am today by always being there for me when I needed him, always being able to spot when I was having trouble with something, and always willing to sit down and talk to me when he saw things were off, or even when I just had questions. He helped influence who I am today by being more than a coach is obligated to be.

4. I want to teach my players how my coach taught me, even bring my players around my coach so he can get a good look at them and help me as needed. I want to teach them to be extremely optimistic when it comes to the things they put their soul and undivided attention into. Next, to be dedicated but open-minded to new opportunities that arise. Also, to be hard-working because closed mouths do not get fed, and time waits for nobody. And last but not least, to love the game, enjoy it, and have that mindset towards everything they do. If you love it, then conquer it with all your passion.

5. A great, positive, and inspirational influencer who always practices what he preaches and leads by example. He gives motivation and energy to fulfill desires, as well as being a calm, understanding individual that players can grow from.
